School of Business Earns Accreditations

The School of Business has maintained its business accreditation by AACSB International. Additionally, the Accounting Program also maintained specialized AACSB Accreditation.

Founded in 1916, AACSB International is the longest serving global accrediting body for business schools that offer undergraduate, master's and doctoral degrees in business and accounting.

The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) Accreditation is the hallmark of excellence in business education and has been earned by less than five percent of the world's business schools.

Today, there are 633 business schools in 40 countries that maintain AACSB Accreditation. Similarly, 177 institutions maintain an additional specialized AACSB Accreditation for their accounting programs. To maintain accreditation a business program must undergo a rigorous internal review every five years, at which the program must demonstrate its continued commitment to the 21 quality standards relating to faculty qualification, strategic management of resources and interactions of faculty and students, as well as a commitment to continuous improvement and achievement of learning goals in degree programs.

“It takes a great deal of self-evaluation and determination to earn and maintain AACSB Accreditation,” said Jerry Trapnell, vice president and chief accreditation officer of AACSB International. “Schools not only must meet specific standards of excellence, but their deans, faculty and staff must make a commitment to ongoing improvement to ensure continued delivery of high-quality education to students.”

Nagan to Head Office of Student Research

Maria Nagan, associate professor of chemistry, has been appointed director of the Office of Student Research.

The University created the OSR in 2009 to promote, facilitate, highlight and assess faculty-mentored student research and creative activities across all disciplines.

The OSR supports research through academic-year and summer grant opportunities, coordinating travel to the National Conference on Undergraduate Research and organizing the Truman Student Research Conference, among other things.

A member of the Truman faculty since 2000, Nagan is a 2010 recipient of the Walker and Doris Allen Fellowship for Faculty Excellence. She has a Ph.D. in chemistry from the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, with specialty areas of biology and physical chemistry. She earned her bachelor’s degree from Grinnell College in Iowa. Her research interests include molecular dynamics simulations of RNA and protein-RNA complexes, particularly those containing modified nucleic acid bases.

Nagan was appointed to an annually renewable term. She succeeds Matthew Beaky, associate professor of physics, who served as the inaugural OSR director.

Elaine Scudder, materials manager and purchaser in the School of Science and Mathematics, was named the Outstanding Scientific Materials Manager of the Year during the NAOSMM convention July 24-29 in Minneapolis, Minn.

The Manager of the Year award is the highest honor given by the National Association of Scientific Materials Managers (NAOSMM). The nomination process includes compiling many letters of recommendation from colleagues, members of NAOSMM and vendors. Community service is also considered, along with contributions to the profession and exemplary work at the nominee’s institution.

Scudder has been a University employee for 23 years. Throughout her 20-year membership with NAOSMM, she has occupied a number of leadership positions, including six years as national secretary, and was honored with the organization’s Outstanding Service Award in 2005.

In addition to a plaque from NAOSMM, Scudder was also awarded a dolphin sculpture of Frabel Glass, donated and presented by Kimble-Chase Glass Company.

NAOSMM is a group of approximately 500 individuals involved in purchasing, receiving, warehousing, distribution and inventory control of chemicals, pharmaceuticals, glassware, plasticware and instruments, as well as special services in research, teaching and research and development fields. Members include representatives from universities, colleges, manufacturers, research laboratories and pharmaceutical companies.

Sigma Delta Pi Receives Top Honor

Truman’s chapter of Sigma Delta Pi, the National Collegiate Hispanic Honor Society, was named co-recipient of the prestigious Ignacio and Sophie Galbis Award, presented annually to the most outstanding chapter nationwide for activities realized during the academic year. This is the third time since 2006 the Truman chapter has received this honor.

Lucy F. Lee, the faculty adviser who also directed the chapter for its two previous awards, was instrumental in earning this year’s national recognition. Lee herself has a distinguished record in Sigma Delta Pi as the 2010 recipient of the Minaya Álvar Fáñez Award, granted yearly to Sigma Delta Pi’s outstanding chapter adviser nationwide. She was also the 2004 recipient of the José Martel Award, presented once every three years to the country’s most outstanding chapter adviser for activities conducted during a five-year period.

With its national office at the College of Charleston in South Carolina, Sigma Delta Pi is a member of the Association of College Honor Societies, the nation's only certifying agency for college and university honor societies.

Introductory Class for MA in Leadership Begins Aug. 31

Introductory class for the Master of Arts in Leadership program begins Aug. 31.

In the Spring 2011 semester, Truman began a new master’s program designed for individuals wanting to advance personal and professional goals.

The Master of Arts in Leadership program helps students acquire a greater understanding of how to lead and navigate organizations and how to build successful relations within and among organizations.

The program includes a solid theoretical foundation in personal and organizational leadership, plus experiential learning consisting of simulations, case studies and internships that will enable students to progress from the study of leadership to its application and practice.

Graduates of the program will have completed a specialization area designed to advance the individual’s personal leadership goals.

For more information, go online to gradstudies.truman.edu/areasofstudy/Leadership.asp, call 785.4109 or email gradinfo@truman.edu.

Clark Young, associate professor of health science, received their Master Certified Health Education Specialist (MCHES) credential from the National Commission for Health Education Credentialing, Inc., (NCHEC). Cox and Young were among the first 812 health education specialists to complete the MCHES Experience Documentation Opportunity process that opened Oct. 15, 2010 and closed April 16, 2011. During this process, applicants documented advanced-level practice in the field of health education and had recommenders attest to their performance and competence levels.

“My experience was an eye-opener,” Young said. “The MCHES process is a comprehensive inventory and assessment tool. It requires program leaders to document practice and demonstrate student performance and competence levels.”

“I am happy that the MCHES credentialing process is recognized on a national level,” Cox said. “I believe it will make a significant impact on our graduates and the field of health education.”

Myra Collins of the Regional Professional Development Center, along with Stacey Craigmyle, a teacher from North Shelby Schools, recently traveled to Indianapolis, Ind., to present at the 2011 Summer Conference for Learning Forward (formerly National Staff Development Council). The workshop, “Determining Levels of Rigor in Common Core State Standards,” was designed to help workshop participants apply the four levels of Depth of Knowledge to the Common Core State Standards for use in instruction and assessment development.

Carolyn Cox, professor of health science, and Janice Benevento, professor of English, and Adam Brooke Davis, professor of English, as well as reviews by Truman students Shawn Bodden, Kasey Perkins and Andrew Kindiger. It can be accessed at ghll.truman.edu/current.html.

Smoking Policy Change

On Dec. 4, 2010, the Code of Policies of the Board of Governors was amended to prohibit smoking within 25 feet of any building on campus property. This policy change went into effect Aug. 1.

Policy already prohibits the use of tobacco in buildings and vehicles owned and controlled by the University. Members of the campus community share the responsibility of adhering to and enforcing this policy. The campus community also has the responsibility of bringing this policy to the attention of visitors. Complaints and concerns should be brought to the attention of the appropriate department or supervisor.
